Pitch to Creators, OSS Teams, and Developer Voices: 'You're not a speaker. You're the experience.'

Full Version

This isn't another conference asking you to make slides, rehearse, or fit into a schedule. This is a completely new format built around you — the people actually shaping the tools and ideas that define modern development.

Instead of putting you on a stage for 30 minutes and hoping people remember your talk, we give you your own space — your own booth — where you can meet developers face-to-face, show them what you're building, and have real, unfiltered conversations.

You decide what happens there. Show a live demo, walk someone through an idea, get feedback, brainstorm, or just talk shop. It's hands-on, organic, and personal — the kind of connection no talk can create.

You'll be surrounded by other creators, frameworks, and projects in a floor full of energy and curiosity. Everyone is there because they already care about the kind of things you build — they're contributors, collaborators, and potential partners waiting to meet you.

A roaming livestream team captures the best moments — quick interviews, demos, collabs, even spontaneous group discussions. You'll be part of the footage, the story, and the energy that will define what this new kind of developer event feels like.

This isn't a presentation. It's participation. It's your work — made real in front of the community that actually uses it.

Why You'll Love It
- No talk anxiety: No decks, no slides, no stage. Just conversation and collaboration.
- Deeper exposure: You'll engage with more people, more meaningfully, than any single talk could.
- Creative control: It's your space. Run it your way.
- Organic visibility: Every camera, every post, every recap captures you in action.
- Real community impact: This format finally lets open-source developers, maintainers, and educators connect directly with the people they're building for.

The Opportunity
We're inviting a small group of builders, maintainers, and dev educators to help pioneer the first event of its kind — one that redefines what it means to show up, share, and connect in tech.

This isn't a speaking gig. It's a chance to be part of something that could reshape the way the entire ecosystem interacts.

Tagline Options
"You're not presenting. You're participating."
"The next generation of developer connection starts with you."
"Less slides. More substance."

30-Second Version

This isn't another talk. You won't need slides or a script. You'll have your own space — your own booth — where you can meet developers, show what you're building, and have real conversations. It's hands-on and organic, built for creators who want to connect more deeply with their community. No pressure, no stage — just genuine engagement with the people who care about what you make.

10-Second Version

No slides. No stage. Just real conversations with the people who use what you build. You're not a speaker — you're the experience.